

Ruth Nyarukira Kinyua

Ruth states that her goal is to become a doctor. Not just any kind of doctor but a cardiologist. And not just any cardiologist but a cardiologist who participates in Doctors Without Borders. She wants to practice in third world countries – not only her homeland of Kenya, but Latin America and sub-Saharan, as well. She sees herself sharing her knowing and research to help those who do not have easy access to medical care.

Ruth has volunteered with the Sharing Life Community Outreach and her knowledge of English, Swahili, and Spanish has served her well in this endeavor, helping her to build a bond with the charity's clients. She states that she often ends her interaction with clients by saying "I hope everything goes well for your family". She further states that the reply is often, "God bless you." She says this give her a strong sense of family working for a greater cause.

Ruth has been accepted at University of Texas at Dallas, Southern Methodist University, and University of Texas at Austin. She plans on majoring in Biochemistry.
